To Whom It May Concern:

Re: June Danoff

Dear Ladies and Gentlemen:

This letter was promised to June many months ago. My apparent delay in getting it written must have appeared to her and to my dear friend and client, her employer Bob Smith, as extreme procrastination. But it was not to procrastinate that I delayed. Rather, I have reluctantly admitted to myself, it was because I really did not want to write the letter at all!

To write a letter of recommendation for June should be as easy as Hallmark printing Father's Day cards; but the very act of writing the letter is an acknowledgment that a grave loss is about to occur in our community and in our professional lives. June is leaving. Although we all want what is best for June, none of us wants June to leave.

During the twenty-five or thirty years that Bob Smith has been my friend and client, in most of them it has been my great pleasure to see and enjoy June's work product. June and I are not "friends"—she has never been to my house nor I to hers; we have never taken a meal together. Yet through all these many years of contact—many of those contacts being telephonic and written, and most under stress and urgent demands, before we all became computer adept—I continually marveled at June's extraordinary responsibility, intellectual agility and, most simply put, her ability to and insistence on getting the job done right. Through all these years there have been many of us in envy of Bob Smith.

Dear reader, if you are reviewing my insights while considering the employment of June Danoff, stop reading immediately—and hire her before someone else does! This is a wonderful, rare person of many grand talents; the likes of June do not often appear.

It would be my pleasure to answer any questions you might have about June.

Very truly yours,

Patrick C. McKeever
